

#331 Theology 5: Apologetics & Ethics
Western Reformed Seminary
John A. Battle, Th.D.
Fall 2016

COURSE INFORMATION

Course objectives

This course is designed to enable you to be familiar with the primary schools of thought regarding apologetics and ethics and with the biblical support offered for each scheme, to be especially familiar with the reformed teachings in these areas, to have formulated your own approach to these areas, and to be able to defend scripturally your approach. You will have read standard explanations of the various schools of apologetics and have studied the important biblical passages related to apologetics.

You also will be familiar with the content of the Ten Commandments and to their application to personal and social ethics. These goals will be achieved through lectures, readings, class assignments and discussions.

1. Explain the main different schools of apologetics and give the reasons for each
2. Give oral or written defenses of the biblical theism and the Christian religion
3. Answer the primary objections advanced against belief in God or the Bible
4. Understand and enunciate the strengths and differences of using the presuppositional approach on one hand, and classical and biblical arguments on the other
5. Pass parts of ordination exams dealing with apologetics and ethics
6. Preach or teach Bible lessons on Christian ethics in general and on the Ten Commandments in particular
